Creator History

Introduction

The Gay Men's Health Crisis (GMHC), America's oldest AIDS organization, organized in 1982, serves to educate the public about HIV/AIDS, provide care services for People with AIDS (PWAs), and advocate at all levels of government for fair AIDS policies. It is a volunteer-supported, community-based organization that provides programs to clients and members of the general public regardless of HIV status, gender, or sexual orientation.

GMHC was founded by six gay men, Nathan Fain, Larry Kramer, Lawrence Mass, Paul Popham, Paul Rapoport, and Edmund White, at Kramer's Manhattan apartment on January 4, 1982. They had all been part of an earlier gathering at Kramer's on August 11, 1981, where Dr. Alvin Friedman-Kien discussed the "gay cancer" that was affecting their friends and lovers. Over $6,600 was raised at that meeting for research into Kaposi's sarcoma at New York University's Medical Center. When the six met in January 1982, they discussed raising more funds for research and organized GMHC's first major event at the Paradise Garage on April 8. The event was called Showers and $50,000 was raised.

While Showers was a success, the group realized that they could do more than simply raise money to help those affected. They decided to try to answer the many questions people had about the disease. The first service provided by the organization was the Hotline, which began in May as an answering machine in the apartment of volunteer, Rodger McFarlane, who later became the organization's second executive director. On the first night, 100 calls were received. While many of the questions could be answered over the phone, some of them required the help of medical, legal, and other professionals to answer. As there was no social service agency to which GMHC could direct these callers, they created the Patient Services Division to provide further help.

Service

In September, Dr. Ken Wein joined GMHC as the first Clinical Director and organized the Crisis Intervention Counselors. The Counselors assisted men who had recently fallen ill and who called the Hotline, were otherwise referred to GMHC, needed assistance maneuvering through the health care system, required help at home, or sought other support that could not be provided over the phone. McFarlane and others had been spending their spare time caring for friends and lovers who were neither able to take care of themselves at home nor represent their own best interests within the health care system. The situation in hospitals was especially critical as these men had to take on the duties of hospital workers, who refused to touch patients or enter their rooms to deliver food.

GMHC created the Buddy Program that September to consolidate the work of these men and to develop a program to train volunteers in assisting PWAs. The program began with 20 men who were on call 24 hours a day to provide assistance, but quickly grew as more men were affected by the disease. The program was staffed entirely by volunteers and initially consisted of people helping friends and lovers affected by AIDS with basic tasks such as grocery shopping, laundry, pet care, as well as spending time with the PWAs. As alarm spread about the disease and hospital staff refused to care for PWAs, Buddies also began to provide nursing care for PWAs and act as intermediaries with social and medical services. A new volunteer position, Crisis Intervention Worker (CIW), was created to assist Buddies in the facilitation of these services. A handful of registered nurses volunteered at GMHC to train people in basic care (bathing, changing, feeding, etc.) of patients.

In 1985, the volunteer position of Crisis Management Partner (CMP) was created that combined the duties of a Buddy and a CIW. CMPs were assigned to PWAs with a number of emotional and physical needs.

As the AIDS epidemic grew and more people became infected, Client Services expanded to provide recreation services and group support service programs for PWAs who were able to leave their homes. Recreation Services consisted of workshops in art, photography, writing, and bridge; trips to museums and other cultural institutions; movies; lunches; and parties. Group Support Services provided group counseling for PWAs and their care partners. These services provided a safe and informal setting to cope with the emotional and social problems associated with AIDS and fostered support networks. By 1985, there were ten groups specifically for PWAs, eleven for their care partners, as well as weekly walk-in groups for PWAs, care partners, and family; groups for children with AIDS and their families; and groups for couples dealing with the disease.

Financial Advocacy Services, Legal Services, and the Office of the Ombudsman quickly followed. These services provided free advice to PWAs, kept them abreast of changes in federal services available to them, and provided advocacy for clients with problems with the healthcare system. As PWAs began living longer and new treatments became available, Client Services provided Nutrition Counseling, offered acupuncture and chiropractic services, and expanded its Recreation Services to include hot meals five days a week and free theater tickets. Additional Support Groups were created to meet the needs of communities within the larger AIDS community.

including women, people of color, and people with chemical dependencies.

By 1987, GMHC had created a position for a Deputy Executive Director for Program Operations which, following a restructuring of the organization in 1989, assumed responsibility for the administration of all of the Client Services programs: Client Advocacy, Education Department, Nutrition and Recreation Services, Legal Services, the Ombudsman Department, and the Volunteer Office.

In 1990, the passage of the Ryan White CARE Act allowed GMHC to expand existing programs and create new ones. Within the next few years, GMHC created a number of programs which included a permanent Deaf AIDS Project (DAP), the Lesbian AIDS Project, and the Tuberculosis Education and Treatment Support Program. By 1993, Education once again became its own department, with its head reporting directly to the Executive Director.

Education

With the discovery of HIV in 1983, GMHC began its mission of education in earnest. Safe sex brochures and guidelines were published and distributed to bathhouses and gay bars. GMHC established information tables around New York City with literature about AIDS and volunteers who could answer questions about AIDS and GMHC's services. Publication of the Health Letter began, providing statistics and research updates. GMHC was recognized as a leader in providing accurate and up-to-date information on AIDS and was consulted by the media, doctors, and health organizations.

In 1984 the Centers for Disease Control asked GMHC to assist them in creating public conferences on AIDS and in April 1985 they were part of the organizing committee of the first International AIDS Conference in Atlanta.

GMHC's AIDS Prevention program was developed in March 1985 once condoms were proven to be an effective means of preventing HIV transmission. It created programs to communicate safe sex practices to the gay community and the growing number of other groups affected by the disease.

By October 1986, GMHC's client base had expanded to include heterosexual men and women, hemophiliacs, intravenous drug-users, and children. This led to innovations in AIDS education by GMHC, including the Medical Information Department which published Treatment Issues and provided information on new therapies; created sexually explicit material such as Safe Sex Comix which showed that safe sex could be fun; and created outreach programs designed to adapt the original sex education classes to African-Americans, Latinos, and lesbians.

The Education Department began an audiovisual program in the mid-1980s which developed the weekly television show Living with AIDS; produced public service announcements and safe sex videos which were shown at safe sex forums, sex clubs, and porn theatres; and created an oral history project in which some founders and staff of GMHC were interviewed in the late 1980s.

In the 1990s the department produced safe sex guidelines for lesbians; created programs for HIV-negative gay and bisexual men; expanded programs aimed at African-American and Latino men; and improved education for teens.

Advocacy

GMHC's advocacy work began in October 1983 with the funding of litigation brought by the Lambda Legal Defense Fund in the first AIDS discrimination case. A New York physician, Dr. Joseph Sonnabend, was threatened with eviction from his office because he was treating PWAs and the building's board felt that this would decrease property values. The case was decided in Sonnabend's favor.

Timothy J. Sweeney, who joined the staff of GMHC in 1986 as the Deputy Executive Director of Policy, created the Public Policy Department. The Department began to fight for increased funding for AIDS research, health care for PWAs, prevention programs, and greater civil rights protections for everyone affected by AIDS. The Department became an advocate at all levels of government for fair AIDS policies and was a leading member of the AIDS Action Council, the New York City HIV Health and Human Services Planning Council, and other groups of AIDS organizations.

Conclusion

At the time of this writing (2009), GMHC still provides many of the services for which it was created; but as AIDS has changed, so have its programs. The organization was created at a time when no one knew what AIDS was or how it was spread and it responded to the needs of its clients as they arose. In the beginning, GMHC provided hands-on, intensive care for PWAs in hospitals and their homes, disseminated timely and available information about AIDS to the affected populations, and provided legal advice. GMHC still provides these services, but now focuses on helping PWAs and HIV positive people to live healthy and productive lives; advocating government for fair policies and scientifically sound public health programs; and solving the legal, financial, and many other issues facing its clients.

Scope and Content Note

The records of the Gay Men's Health Crisis (GMHC) document the three aspects of the organization's activities and contain brochures, correspondence, memoranda, minutes, pamphlets, photographs, posters, questionnaires, reports, sound recordings, surveys, video recordings, and other material. The bulk of the collection consists of correspondence, memoranda, and reports regarding GMHC's safe sex education programs and client services. The collection is arranged by the departments of the organization, beginning with the Executive Director and then continuing alphabetically from the Board of Directors through Women's Education Services. The largest series is the Education Department which contains material on GMHC's groundbreaking safe sex and AIDS prevention programs, dissemination of AIDS information, and training programs for health care workers. The Client Services records contain minutes of Buddy Teams, Crisis Intervention Workers, and Crisis Management Partners meetings. These minutes contain detailed information on how the volunteers assisted PWAs, the rapid spread of AIDS in the early days of the epidemic, and the physical and emotional toll these had on the PWAs and the volunteers. More information about each department can be found in the series notes.

Electronic records can be found throughout the collection, though the bulk of the computer files represent the work of the Education Department's various units. Of note are the files of Franklin Carson, the interim director for the department in the early 1990s. His electronic files fill in a gap in the paper records of his predecessor and successor. The files of this department also include components of the Hotline's database, which can emulate the database used by hotline counselors when answering caller's questions and directing them to services. The database contains information regarding doctors, social services, and businesses that supported or served PWAs. The electronic records also document GMHC's efforts to disseminate information through issues of the organization's newsletters AIDS Clinical Update and Treatment Issues.

The records as a whole reflect the explosive growth of GMHC and often contain overlapping or similar material within and across departments. During the first ten years of its existence, the organization had to react quickly to the changing needs of its clients by expanding and creating departments, new programs, and positions. As a result of this, some series may contain material similar to another series. For example, GMHC's work with specific populations, such as prisoners, intravenous drug users, or the hearing impaired may be found across the collection as their needs were addressed through public policy, direct services, topical broadcast television productions, and discussed in administrative correspondence and board meeting minutes. Also, one unit may contain material relating to another unit due to GMHC's restructuring of departments. Occurrences of significant overlap between departments are described at the series or subseries levels.

Series I: Board of Directors 1982-1993 (20 boxes 8.63 linear feet)

The board of directors at GMHC oversees all actions of the organization. The members of the first board were Paul Popham (also the first president of GMHC), Harry Diaz, Nathan Fain, Brad Frandsen, Joe Hernandez, Larry Kramer, Lawrence Mass, Larry McDevitt, and Joe Paschek. The first board meetings were held at members' apartments and covered all aspects of the organization from the first fundraising events, the newsletter, and information and booths at Gay Pride Day. At the time, the board members were also employees and volunteers of GMHC and usually the only staff members of what eventually became the departments of the organization.

This series contains minutes of board meetings, packets created to prepare executive directors for board meetings, correspondence with board members, and material from committees of the board.

Subseries I. A. Board Meeting Minutes 1982-1992 (2.25 boxes)

The minutes of the meetings of the board of directors begin in April 1982 with the first meetings of GMHC and continue through 1992. The minutes for the first few years reflect the organization's exponential growth from a handful of men meeting in an apartment to thousands of employees and volunteers working in a 12-story building. They contain information on the development of all aspects of GMHC, including its client services, educational mission, fundraising initiatives, and increasing public awareness about HIV/AIDS.

Series II: Executive Director 1982-1996 (64 boxes 26.5 linear feet)

The executive director oversees the work of the various departments of GMHC and reports on these to the board of directors. Mel Rosen was the first executive director of GMHC, elected in August 1982 and serving until July of 1983 when he became the director of the AIDS Institute. Rodger McFarlane returned to GMHC that month and served as executive director until June 1985. Richard Dunne (1985-1989), Jeffrey Braff (1989-1990), Timothy J. Sweeney (1990-1993), and Jeff Richardson (1993-1994) served in this position and are represented in this series.

In the beginning of GMHC's history, the executive director was directly involved in all operations of the organization. McFarlane was responsible for moving the organization from its first office (a series of rooms in a building owned by Mel Cheren on West 22nd Street) to a larger office on West 18th Street and for formalizing some of GMHC's social programs, the Crisis Intervention Services and the Buddy Program. Dunne was the last executive director to have the same level of involvement with the development of the organization before it grew too large for any one person to have such a relationship.

This series contains correspondence, memoranda, minutes, reports, and other material created by and sent to the executive director.

The following files are closed until 2066 per the Gay Men's Health Crisis: Subseries A. Client complaints; Subseries C. Client complaints; and Subseries D. Client complaints.

Subseries II. A. Richard Dunne 1982-1991 (38 boxes)

Richard Dunne became the executive director in 1985 after Rodger McFarlane left GMHC. Dunne had been involved in the organization since January 1983 when he volunteered as a Buddy. He had three clients in eight months and while he enjoyed this work, he quickly became overwhelmed by the emotional investment required from him. Dunne asked for a change and became a Buddy Team Leader in August of 1983. He enjoyed this work and remained in this position until June 1985 when he became executive director.

Between 1985 and 1989, Dunne oversaw huge growth in GMHC. During his four years as executive director, the paid staff grew from 17 to 125, the volunteer staff from 500 to 1800, and the budget from $800,000 to $12 million. He brought GMHC into the mainstream and into every conversation about HIV/AIDS. Under his direction, GMHC began to provide information on experimental drugs and therapies, started recreational programs for PWAs, and a program to help children with AIDS.

Dunne stepped down from his position in September 1989. He died on December 29, 1990 of an AIDS-related illness.

This subseries contains correspondence, memoranda, minutes, and other material created and used by Richard Dunne during his tenure as executive director of GMHC and material created by Mel Rosen and Rodger McFarlane, who held the position before Dunne. A great deal of the material consists of copies of articles on issues relevant to the early years of the AIDS epidemic, some with notes made by Dunne. The GMHC History folder contains correspondence and notes from 1982, including Rodger McFarlane's letter of resignation from the board, a letter from Larry Kramer to Ed Koch inviting him to the Circus and asking him to name the week of April 24, 1983 AID FOR AIDS WEEK. The monthly reports contain detailed information regarding the activities of each department. Included are statistics for Hotline calls, tabling events, and client demographics; lists of media reports regarding GMHC; developments across the organization; and the status of current projects and plans for future ones. Also of interest are the files on the AIDS Advisory Council of the AIDS Institute and the bathhouses in New York City.

Series III. Client Programs 1988-1998 (15 boxes 6.25 linear feet) (14 computer files 118.8 kilobytes)

The Client Programs department oversaw the various services provided by GMHC to help clients adapt to and live life with HIV/AIDS. The name of this department changed a number of times and included Program Operations and Program Management. The department was responsible for creating new programs, managing existing programs, and maintaining funding for both.

The department administered the following units:

Client Services
Client Advocacy
Education Department
Legal Services
Office of the Ombudsman
Volunteer Office

Each of these units had a department head who reported to the deputy executive director for Client Programs.

The records of Client Services, the Education Department, Legal Services, and the Office of the Ombudsman are not part of this series but are available respectively in Series IV, VII, IX and X of the collection. The records of the Client Advocacy department and the Volunteer Office were not transferred from GMHC, although small amounts of materials related to these departments may be found throughout the collection.

The series contains reports, memoranda, and correspondence from the Client Programs department. Included here are statistics and summary reports on existing programs and proposals for new programs. The series is divided into three subseries and contains the administrative files of the department, records of the Deaf AIDS Project, and records of the Tuberculosis Education and Treatment Support Program. This series contains electronic records.

Subseries III. A. Administrative Files 1988-1998 (10.5 boxes, 118.8 KB (14 computer files))

This subseries contains reports, memoranda, notes, and correspondence produced by the Client Programs department. Included are Monthly Program Reports which contain statistics and summaries of programs for the AIDS Institute and the Medical and Health Research Association of New York City. There are also proposals for the department's Immigrants with HIV-Related Illness Project and the Food Services Proposal, both funded by the first Ryan White CARE Act.

The Immigrants with HIV-Related Illness Project was created to provide legal services for immigrants in New York City with HIV-related illness. The project sought to obtain government benefits for immigrants and help with housing, discrimination, and personal affairs planning such as wills and medical directives. The Food Services Program was created in 1986 by the Recreation Department of Client Programs to provide meals five days a week to clients who were homeless, living in shelters, and/or were eligible for Medicare and/or Medicaid. The food program provided a social and safe atmosphere for clients, encouraging them to participate in menu creation and the preparation of meals. The 1991 Proposal sought to expand the services by 15,600 more meals per week. Electronic records consist of job descriptions for various positions in the Volunteer Office, the Bridges program, and the Lesbian AIDS Project.

Subseries III. B. Deaf AIDS Project (DAP) 1990-1997 (2 boxes)

The Deaf AIDS Project (DAP) began in 1987, independent of GMHC, when a group consisting of members of the deaf community, their supporters, and interpreters met to discuss the lack of AIDS education within the deaf community and homophobia within the environment of deaf services in New York City. English is a second language to many deaf Americans and the average deaf adult has a reading comprehension level between the third and eighth grade levels. Because of this, most of them did not know about AIDS. DAP looked to GMHC to provide a safe haven and to help form a permanent group to discuss these issues, but the two groups ran into a number of problems and were unable to form a permanent program until the early 1990s. In 1991, the DAP Staff Coordination Group was formed to create programs within GMHC that were focused on deaf clients. DAP established a Speakers Bureau to provide education about HIV/AIDS to deaf schools and organizations, implemented a TTY Hotline at GMHC, and produced HIV/AIDS videos and brochures for the deaf.

Included in this subseries are mock-ups of and notes on the HIV/AIDS brochure for the deaf community. The minutes of the DAP Staff Coordination Group describe the initial problems encountered by DAP and GMHC, the need for DAP, and other issues in the deaf community.

Subseries III. C. Tuberculosis Education and Treatment Support Program 1993-1997 (1 box)

The Tuberculosis Education and Treatment Support Program was developed in 1993 in response to the resurgence of tuberculosis (TB) in New York City. The program provided information about TB to clients, ongoing training about TB in social service settings and in the workplace, and sought to reduce the transmission of TB at GMHC facilities. Within the first year of the program HEPA filters were installed throughout the agency, tissues and face masks were made available on-site, TB posters and "cover your mouth" signs were posted in all reception areas, numerous on-site screenings for staff and clients were conducted, and a requirement was implemented for all new clients to provide documentation of their TB status.

This subseries contains reports, memoranda, and correspondence of the Tuberculosis Education and Treatment Support Program. Included here are monthly reports and yearly reviews of the Program and minutes from the TB Working Group. All of these documents detail the steps taken by the TB program to reduce transmission of the disease within GMHC's community.

Series IV. Client Services 1983-1997 (29 boxes 11.46 linear feet)

Client Services (known as Clinical Services until the mid-1980s) is the oldest department at GMHC, and developed out of the Buddy Program, which was initiated in 1982. The department managed the following programs:

Case Management
Crisis Intervention Services
Financial Advocacy
Group Support
Intake Unit
Nutrition and Recreation Services

Each of these departments had a director or coordinator who reported to the head of Client Services. Only the records of the Crisis Intervention Services and a small amount of material from the Intake Unit and the Nutrition and Recreation Services were transferred from GMHC. Some material from the other Client Services departments may be found dispersed throughout the collection.

Included are training manuals and handbooks, statistics on clients, and recreation program descriptions. There are three subseries, the Administrative Files, records of the Crisis Intervention Services, and Nutrition Assessment Forms. Video recordings associated with this series can be found in Series XVI. B. 1.

The following files are closed until 2066 per the Gay Men's Health Crisis: Subseries C. Nutrition Assessment Forms.

IV. A. Administrative Files 1983-1997 (9 boxes)

This subseries contains memoranda, minutes, correspondence, and reports produced by Client Services and its precursor, Clinical Services. Included are Buddy Support Program training manuals and Crisis Intervention Team handbooks which detail the roles of the Buddy and Crisis workers. Material from the Intake and Referral Department includes manuals, statistics compiled by the Department of the numbers of clients admitted, memoranda, and client forms. Records of Recreation Services consist of descriptions of the program and the types of events sponsored, records of activities for 1987 to 1990, and client questionnaires. There are also minutes from Client Services staff meetings for 1983 through 1987 which reflect the growth of the department.

IV. B. Crisis Intervention Services 1983-1997 (8 boxes)

Crisis Intervention Services administered the three crisis programs at GMHC:

Crisis Intervention Workers

Crisis Management Partners

These services were generally the first a PWA received upon arriving at GMHC and provided emotional support and assistance with social services.

The Buddy Program was one of the first services provided by GMHC, begun in 1982 as a formal program continuing the work of people helping their friends and lovers who were affected by AIDS. Buddies were volunteers who assisted PWAs with everyday tasks such as shopping, laundry, dog walking, as well as providing companionship. Team meetings were held at members' apartments and included accounts of what they had done the previous month with their client and reports on the client's mental and physical status, living situation, and any other particulars deemed important by the team member. The Crisis Intervention Worker (CIW) program evolved out of the Buddy Program. As more and more people became infected with AIDS and were turned away from hospitals or refused services from other agencies, Buddies started to act as intermediaries. GMHC soon divided the two areas of responsibility, leaving the Buddies to provide more emotional and practical support while the CIW handled social services issues for the client. The role of the CIW expanded over time to include peer counseling and to act as a liaison between the client, GMHC, and other agencies. The CIW generally worked with the client for a few weeks, while the Buddy would stay with the client as long as was needed. The Crisis Management Partner program began in 1985 and combined the roles of the Buddies and the Crisis Intervention Workers (CIW).

This subseries contains the meeting minutes for the programs administered by the Crisis Intervention Services Department. The minutes reflect on the impact of the AIDS epidemic at the personal level and contain discussions of the problems encountered by volunteers seeking to help their clients; address methodology and the need for maintaining confidentiality; and consider the difficulties encountered assisting clients, and the psychological and emotional effects on the volunteers.

Series V. Communications Department 1985-1997 (13 boxes, 1 tube 5.42 linear feet)

The Communications Department (originally known as the Public Information Department) was responsible for the dissemination of public information on AIDS; press relations with GMHC; advocacy advertisement campaigns and policy issues for internal communications regarding clients, volunteers, and staff. Members of the department strove to ensure that stories on AIDS were reported accurately and sensitively. The department was also responsible for publishing the monthly News from GMHC, the bimonthly The Volunteer, and the annual reports which were sent to clients, volunteers, and donors.

Administrative files of the Communications Department consist of memoranda and reports for various departments within GMHC describing their programs. The files reflect the close collaboration the Communications Department had with the Public Policy Department. A large portion of the Communication Department's work was ensuring that the public was consistently briefed on GMHC's AIDS public policy and understood how GMHC services interfaced with city and state services for PWAs. There are also lists of reporters and news sources with which GMHC had contact. The file entitled Media Reporting contains letters to editors of various newspapers and a paper on media coverage of AIDS before Rock Hudson's revelation that he had the disease.

Series VI. Development Department 1982-1997 (17 boxes 7.21 linear feet) (4 computer files 313.8 kilobytes)

The Development Department was responsible for raising the majority of GMHC's funding through direct mail, foundation and governmental funding, donors, and special events. The department sought to raise most of its funds from its special events, rather than be dependent on government programs. The special events created by GMHC included circuses, dance-a-thons, the AIDS Walk, art auctions, the Morning Party, and many others.

This series is divided into three subseries: Administrative Files; Special Events; and the records of Patricia Evert who served as assistant director of Development and Special Events Director. Video recordings associated with this series can be found in Series XVI. B. 2. This series contains electronic records.

Subseries VI. A. Administrative Files 1982-1995 (2 boxes)

Series VII. Education Department 1982-1997 (83 boxes 34.29 linear feet) (1160 computer files; 4 disk images 14.7 megabytes)

The Education Department was responsible for providing information to the public about HIV/AIDS and treatments available for PWAs. The structure of the department changed over time, but the basic services provided were general information, outreach, prevention, and training. The department consisted of the following units:

AIDS Prevention
AIDS Professional Education Program
Community Health Education Services
Information and Training Services
Treatment Education and Advocacy

Each of these departments had a director or coordinator who reported directly to the director of the Education Department.

The series is arranged by departmental units and two general categories: Surveys and Questionnaires and Topical Files. These last two categories contain material maintained and utilized across the department. Video recordings associated with this series can be found in Series XVI. B. 3. This series contains electronic records.

Subseries VII. B. AIDS Prevention 1988-1995 (8.5 boxes)

The AIDS Prevention division of the Education Department provided HIV/AIDS prevention information, risk reduction programs, and behavior change interventions to various communities. The programs were aimed at specific groups with the exception of the Street Outreach program which targeted the general public. Understanding Safer Sex, Keep It Up!, and Eroticizing Safer Sex were some of the workshops developed by this division. The division also distributed literature at gay bathhouses and other gay sex venues and continued the organization's outreach activities of staffing information tables around New York City.

Records from the AIDS Prevention division of the Education Department consist of correspondence, memoranda, reports, minutes, and other documents. Included are brochures published and distributed by the division, monthly reports on its programs, and program evaluations.

Subseries VII. C. AIDS Professional Education Program (APEP) 1982-1997
(15.5 boxes, 1.47 Megabytes (176 computer files))

The AIDS Professional Education Program (APEP), begun in 1986, provided free, on-site training workshops at community-based mental health agencies, alcoholism programs, community residences, and hospitals. Sessions were aimed at small groups of mental health professionals which met for four or more weekly sessions. Participants were given information about HIV/AIDS, referral resources, and useful counseling and risk behavior modification therapies. APEP trainers would tailor sessions to each organization's needs and the existing level of HIV/AIDS knowledge of its staff.

This subseries contains memoranda, reports, manuals, correspondence, and other material from the AIDS Professional Education Program (APEP). Included are manuals for APEP trainers, files detailing the background and skills of the trainers, and reports on trainings. The training reports contain correspondence between APEP and interested organizations, notes from sessions, and sign-in sheets for sessions listing attendees and their position or title. Electronic records contain background documents on the creation of APEP, training materials, and internal memoranda. The file on agencies contains lists of organizations who worked with APEP as well as assessment forms to be filled out by GMHC or agency staff members.

Subseries VII. D. Community Health Education Services (CHES) 1982-1997 (14.25 boxes, 1.45 Megabytes (1 disk image, 186 computer files))

The Community Health Education Services (CHES) division of the Education Department was responsible for delivering AIDS information to the public via information tables, direct mail and telephone campaigns, as well as connecting with underserved communities. CHES accomplished these goals through a series of programs and initiatives: the Community Support Network, People of Color AIDS Prevention program, the Speakers' Bureau, and the distribution of pamphlets through tabling events. The Community Support Network (CSN) began in 1982 and maintained the distribution and collection of donation cans and literature at gay establishments, mostly bars and bathhouses. By 1988, more than 300 establishments in New York City participated in CSN. The People of Color AIDS Prevention (POC) program conducted outreach to gay and bisexual men of minority communities, mainly Blacks and Latinos. POC adapted its literature for these communities and created focus groups and advisory panels made up of members of the communities. Programs targeted at these communities included What's in it 4 Me?, a workshop by and for gay black men and Noche de Ronda, a safe sex play in Spanish. The Speakers' Bureau was staffed by volunteers who gave presentations on HIV/AIDS and safe sex, their personal experiences with AIDS, homophobia and AIDS, and women and AIDS. These presentations were free and held at community centers, churches, schools, anywhere groups of people gathered. Tabling was another early program of GMHC. Volunteers distributed literature and were stationed at information tables throughout New York City in high traffic areas, especially ones with large populations of gay men. The service expanded to tables scheduled for street fairs, conferences, and health fairs.

This subseries contains memoranda, reports, correspondence, and other material related to the Community Health Education Services division of the Education Department. The subseries is divided into eight sub-subseries: the Administrative Files of the department, the files of the Assistant Coordinator, the Assistant Director, and the Coordinator, the Community Support Network (CSN), the People of Color AIDS Prevention program, the Speakers' Bureau, and the Tabling initiative. Included here are information sheets on CSN establishments; statistical reports listing numbers and locations of literature and condoms distributed; assessments of outreach tables; plans for expansions of the division; the log of the Volunteer Manager which contains daily entries describing volunteer interviews, work done by volunteers, and other events of the day; memoranda on planned bar interventions and zaps (targeted protests aimed at a specific person or organization); correspondence with organizations requesting Speakers' Bureau presentations; and reports on these events.

Electronic records contain correspondence, memoranda, statistical reports, and analysis on the efficiency of certain department programs. Correspondence and memoranda detail outreach at events, primarily through tabling, and the development of informational literature and condom packets. The statistical reports were produced monthly and detail workshops, forums, and interventions hosted by CHES. These reports include the number of attendees for each program and a brief description of the audience for each event. The records also contain a Spanish assistance program that GMHC used to translate content and a Medical Information Mailing System for organizing mailings.

Subseries VII. E. Information and Training Services 1983-1994 (17.5 boxes, 3.82 Megabytes (3 disk images, 25 computer files))

The Information and Training Services division of the Education Department was responsible for the Hotline telephone service; the A-Team which provided information for walk-ins to GMHC and follow-up for Hotline callers; overseeing the AIDS Professional Education Program (APEP); training new staff and volunteers; and providing continuing education programs to keep the entire Department up to date about AIDS.

This subseries contains correspondence, memoranda, minutes, reports and other material from the Information and Training Services division of the Education Department. The subseries is divided into the files of the Assistant Director and the Training Coordinator. Included here are memoranda and reports on program development, reports on in-service trainings for Education Department staff and volunteers, requests for training sessions for AIDS service providers other than GMHC including profiles of the organization requesting training, and questionnaires completed by participants in the training programs. Electronic records consist of disk images for the Hotline, and correspondence, memoranda, and reports detailing the development of the new Hotline system and the bidding process to find a new vendor. The records also include TDD instructions for the hearing impaired.

Subseries VII. H. Treatment, Education and Advocacy (TEA) 1987-1993 (1 box, 4.13 Megabytes (232 computer files))

The Information and Training Services division of the Education Department was responsible for the Hotline telephone service; the A-Team which provided information for walk-ins to GMHC and follow-up for Hotline callers; overseeing the AIDS Professional Education Program (APEP); training new staff and volunteers; and providing continuing education programs to keep the entire Department up to date about AIDS.

The bulk of this material is correspondence with public health, university, government, and research organizations regarding Treatment Issues, TEA's advocacy work, the participation of employees of the division in conferences and workshops on HIV/AIDS, and other topics. Electronic records contain files for the Medical Information Department, a department that was later absorbed into TEA. This department published AIDS Clinical Update, a quarterly newsletter geared for clinicians providing care for PWAs. Files include drafts of AIDS Clinical Update, department budgets, interoffice correspondence and memoranda, and correspondence with medical professionals. These records also contain letters written by Wayne Kawadler, the assistant coordinator, in his capacity as a member of ACT UP. Records relating to Treatment Issues consist of digital copies of issues, as well as interviews pertaining to a 1990 study on the effectiveness of the newsletter.

Series VIII. Evaluation Research Department 1989-1999 (92 boxes 38.33 linear feet) (48 computer files 1.8 megabytes)

The Evaluation Research Department was officially established in 1993 with the consolidation of program evaluation and research service staff into one unit. Members of the department conducted quality assurance audits on GMHC programs; assisted other departments in their work, such as the effective development of ad campaigns and brochures; and conducted studies with other agencies and institutions. These collaborations included the Linkage Project, where GMHC and the Jewish Board of Family and Child Services worked to assign mental health professionals to PWAs; and in the development of the Deaf AIDS Project, where GMHC consulted with staff from the New York Society for the Deaf. In conjunction with the Research Ethics Committee (formally the Institutional Review Board until 1996), the department evaluated internal and external project proposals from researchers interested in conducting studies at GMHC.

This series contains memoranda, project proposals, questionnaires, surveys, interview transcripts, reports, and grant applications. The series is divided into three subseries: Administrative Files, Research Materials, and Topical Files. This series contains electronic records.

Subseries VIII. A. Administrative Files 1989-1999 (17 boxes, 23.96 Kilobytes (1 computer file))

This subseries contains the Administrative Files of the Evaluation Research Department, maintained by the directors and assistant directors of the department, and proposals submitted to the Research Ethics Committee. Included in this subseries are audits of GMHC programs, development and feedback on research studies and client programs such as the Deaf AIDS Project (DAP), Gay Men of African Descent (GMAD), House of Latex (HOL) and Substance Use Counseling and Education (SUCE). Also included are applications for state and city funding that provide an overview of the department's projects and activities. The electronic record is instructions for volunteers on conducting interviews for the Client Tuberculosis Survey (1995).

Subseries VIII. B. Research Materials 1990-1997 (69 boxes, 1.81 Megabytes (47 computer files))

The Research Materials are arranged alphabetically by study and consist of surveys, questionnaires and typed transcripts of interviews. Information was gathered from participants by volunteers and department staff who spoke to participants either in person or over the phone. Some studies were used to evaluate the effectiveness of GMHC programs, such as the Keep It Up and Hotline studies. Others, like the Deaf AIDS Project Brochure Focus Group, were used to assist other departments to disseminate information more effectively to their targeted audience. Electronic records consist of interviews for two studies. One study is on health insurance and the other is on alcohol use and its effect on sexual behavior. Additional materials related to surveys can be found in the Education Department records, Series VII.F.

Series XII. Public Policy Department 1983-1997 (43 boxes 17.92 linear feet)

The Public Policy Department lobbied government at all levels for fair HIV/AIDS policies; published policy statements on these issues; led HIV/AIDS coalitions; and provided information on the positions of elected officials on these issues.

The series is divided into five subseries: Administrative Files, the Alcohol and Other Drugs Workgroup, the Committee for AIDS Funding, Organizations Files, and Topical Files.

The following files are closed until 2066 per the Gay Men's Health Crisis: Subseries B. Harm reduction.

Subseries XII. A. Administrative Files 1983-1997 (19 boxes)

The files of the Public Policy Department consist of correspondence and reports on GMHC's response to the Centers for Disease Control's definitions of AIDS and their efforts to have more groups included in the definition. There are correspondence, minutes, and reports from the New York City HIV Health and Human Services Planning Council which, among other things, prioritized allocation of funds from the Ryan White CARE Act and monitored health care services for PWAs in New York City. Also included are files on legislation regarding HIV/AIDS and GMHC's opinion on the bills and files on the development of GMHC's policy on HIV testing, Social Security benefits for PWAs, and other issues.

Union Organizing Committee

The Union Organizing Committee developed in 1993 from the Staff Caucus and attempted to organize under Local 1199 United Healthcare Workers. The Committee sought to strengthen the job security, bargaining strength, and voice of the staff. Issues of racism, job security, and the attitude of the management towards the Staff Caucus led to this unionization attempt. The unionization vote was held on February 4, 1994, resulted in a split decision, and the staff did join Local 1199.

Series XV. Women's Education Services 1991-1997 (2 boxes 0.83 linear feet)

The Women's Education Services (WES) division of GMHC was created in 1996 and was an expansion of existing programs for women at GMHC. WES grew from the Lesbian AIDS Project, which became a part of WES but remained a distinct program. WES promoted existing GMHC programs for women; adapted programs aimed at heterosexual couples to the needs of lesbian, bisexual, and transgendered women; developed brochures and safe sex kits for women; and established support groups focusing on parenting and relationships.

This series contains correspondence, memoranda, and other material from the Women's Education Services division of GMHC and is divided into two sections: Administrative Files and the Lesbian AIDS Project (LAP). LAP was created to conduct outreach to HIV positive lesbians, make them feel welcome at GMHC, and provide education and other services. Included in the Administrative Files are files on the creation of brochures for WES, the development of Women's Open Houses held at GMHC, and workshops for women. The LAP section contains manuals for workshops and memoranda on LAP Notes, the program's quarterly national newsletter.

Series XVI. Audiovisual Department 1984-1999 (906 video recordings)

The Audiovisual Department was created to raise public awareness; serve as a means of communicating the medical, social, and psychological ramifications of the HIV/AIDS epidemic; and to support prevention and training programs. In addition to producing its own programming, the department assisted other GMHC departments by documenting training sessions and creating promotional and outreach videos. The department, created in 1987, was originally staffed by an audiovisual specialist, Jean Carlomusto, and an assistant coordinator, Gregg Bordowitz. In the mid-1990s, Juanita Mohammed and Chas Brack were the specialist and assistant coordinator, respectively, with Carlomusto and Bordowitz still working part-time. The Audiovisual Department, which was originally under the auspices of the Publications Department, later became part of the Education Department.

This series is arranged into five subseries: Broadcast Productions, Departmental Productions, Oral Histories, Public Service Announcements (PSAs), and Miscellaneous. Broadcast Productions contains material from three shows: AIDS Network, Outreach, and Living With AIDS. The bulk of the material consists of original footage used for the Living with AIDS television show, the longest running of the three broadcast shows. Additional guest videographers produced Living with AIDS segments, adding a range of perspectives that contributed to the broad scope of the show. These videographers include Marina Alvarez, Sarah Cawley, Ronald Dodd, Andres J. Figueroa, Laura Ganis, Alexandra Juhasz, Ray Navarro, Steven Okazaki, Catherine Saalfeld, Kristin Thomas, and Paul Zakrzewski. Also included in this series are departmental productions, including films that explicitly demonstrate safe sex practices, oral history interviews, and public service announcements.

The series consists of both unedited original footage and masters of completed works. The original tape numbers were retained when available and usually demonstrate the sequence in which the footage was shot. Interviews consist of unedited interviews with one or more subjects. Original footage consists of footage of events, b-roll, or dramatizations, as well as occasional interviews with subjects involved in the event or dramatization.

Subseries XVI. A. Broadcast Productions 1985-1999

This subseries includes productions that were aired regularly on public access television. The department produced three shows: AIDS Network (1985-1986), Outreach (1987), and Living with AIDS (1987-1999). These broadcast productions represent the bulk of the department's efforts and this subseries contains the majority of raw footage found within this collection; most notably the original, unedited interviews for the Living with AIDS show.

XVI. A. 1. AIDS Network 1985-1986

AIDS Network was a thirty-minute program that included live interviews with caretakers, service providers, and PWAs. Each show was introduced by Lori Behrman. All videos in this section are mastered productions of aired episodes of AIDS Network. This section is arranged by a numerical designation given by the department.

XVI. A. 3. Living With AIDS 1987-1999

Living with AIDS was a thirty-minute program that sought to provide quality programming to people with AIDS. The first episode aired in 1987 and the series ran until 1999. Initially the show was filmed as either a short documentary or as a live show with a panel of guests discussing a single topic. Over time it evolved into a magazine-based format. Each show was made up of 8-10 minute segments. The shows were repackaged and reaired in a changing combination of segments. The segments covered a variety of topics such as healthcare and treatment; activism; risk reduction strategies; raising families; and maintaining relationships. Recurring series were Caring, which profiled caretakers and activists; Medical Updates, which provided users timely treatment and medical information; and Video Portraits, short portrayals of individuals affected by AIDS. Also included are videos that were produced by outside videographers and screened during GMHC programs, such as John Greyson's The Pink Pimpernel and The World is Sick.

This section is arranged alphabetically by show title. There are edited masters for the majority of the shows, and many included additional unedited interviews and original footage. With the exception of "Compiled material," all tapes retain the numbers given by GMHC staff and usually demonstrate the sequence in which the footage was shot. Compiled material consists of tapes that held multiple masters. These masters either reflect a Living With AIDS show as it was screened, or were a method of collocating masters onto one tape.

This section also includes focus group sessions on audio tapes. The focus groups were part of a study to ascertain how people received information about AIDS and their opinions on AIDS.
