Creator History

Stuart Ostrow-producer, director, author and teacher-was a driving force behind many successful Broadway productions from the 1960s through the 1990s. Born in 1932 in New York City to Abe and Anna Ostrow, he graduated from New York University with a degree in music education. After serving in the Air Force from 1952-1955, he married singer Ann Elizabeth Gilbert in 1957, with whom he had three children. While in the Air Force, Ostrow produced and directed many camp shows.

Ostrow began his work in music and theater as Frank Loesser's apprentice in 1955. By 1961 he had become the vice president and general manager of Frank Music Corporation, working on The Most Happy Fella, The Music Man, Greenwillow, and How to Succeed in Business Without Really Trying. By the time he was 28, Ostrow decided that he had enough experience to try producing on his own, and he flew to London to tell Loesser in person that he was leaving the company to produce his first solo venture, We Take the Town starring Robert Preston.

While We Take the Town never made it to Broadway, Ostrow went on to produce a great variety of successful shows. In 1963, he directed and produced Meredith Willson's Here's Love, based on A Miracle on 34th St. In the 1960s he also produced The Apple Tree (1966) and 1776 (1969), which received not only the New York and London Drama Critics Awards, but the Tony Award for Best Musical. The success of 1776 was followed by Scratch in 1971, a show in which Ostrow worked closely with poet Archibald MacLeish. The show was a commercial flop, but was followed by Stephen Schwartz's Pippin in 1972, which ran for five years and had West End and touring productions. In 1978 Ostrow lent his hand to writing and producing a play, Stages, which closed on opening night. The same fate befell his 1981 production of The Mooney Schapiro Songbook. Ostrow's next major production to reach Broadway was M. Butterfly in 1988. Although slow to build an audience, it ultimately ran for nearly two years on Broadway with success leading to a production on the West End and a national tour. M. Butterfly won the 1988 Tony Award and Drama Desk Award for Best Play, as well as earning a nomination for the 1989 Pulitzer Prize for Drama. Ostrow's next major project, a producing collaboration between Ostrow and Andrew Lloyd Webber, was La Bête in 1991, which struggled due to mixed reviews and casting problems.

In 1973, Ostrow established the Stuart Ostrow Foundation's Musical Theatre Lab, a nonprofit professional workshop for original musical theatre. The Lab ran in several incarnations through the years at St. Clements church in New York, the Kennedy Center and, for a time, at Radcliffe.

He joined the faculty at the University of Houston as the Cynthia Woods Mitchell Chair in Theater in 1994 and relocated the Lab to Houston. He later became the Distinguished University Professor of Theatre at the University of Houston. In addition to his theatrical achievements, Ostrow is the author of A Producer's Broadway Journey, Thank You Very Much (The Little Guide To Auditioning For The Musical Theatre), and Present At The Creation, Leaping In The Dark and Going Against The Grain: 1776, Pippin, M. Butterfly, La Bête & Other Broadway Adventures. The Anatomy of a Broadway Musical, which traces the journey of a musical production from conception to realization, was published in 2010.

Scope and Content Note

The Stuart Ostrow papers chiefly document his professional life. These papers demonstrate the deep commitment Ostrow had to the theater not just as a business, but as an art form. His drive to support shows and artists in which he believed is evident in his producing practices, giving struggling shows time to build an audience and taking chances on little known playwrights. His passion for intellectual theater as well as the development of new works is evident throughout his correspondence. The general administrative and production files make up the bulk of this collection, and contain correspondence, scripts, scores, photographs, scrapbooks, and other materials pertaining to Ostrow's work in theater. There is also material documenting Ostrow's Musical Theatre Lab, artwork and scenic design renderings, correspondence regarding various committees on which Ostrow served, publication files containing drafts and permissions for three of his books, some family papers, and legal records primarily regarding M. Butterfly and the David Geffen Theatre.

Series I: General Administration Files 1955-2007

This series contains files kept by Ostrow in his capacity as a producer. In chronological order, these contain primarily correspondence, as well as notes, business files, projects for consideration, memos, proposals, and other materials related to the day-to-day workings of his production office. There is a heavy focus on procuring capitalization and the search for creative teams and potential artists. Of interest are the pitches playwrights and their agents submitted in an effort to enlist Ostrow as a producer on their projects. Ostrow mingled business with his personal relationships and often a letter pertaining to a contract is followed by an introduction of a lyricist to a composer with whom he might collaborate, or a thank you note for an invitation to an opening night. Honors and awards, including correspondence from the White House in recognition of Ostrow's achievements, can be found at the end of this series.

Series II: Production Files 1956-1999

The productions series contains files relating to specific productions or in-development projects (properties). They consist of audition notes, budgets, cast lists, contact sheets, contracts, correspondence, costume sketches, financial materials, photographs (both production and candid), playbills, programs, production notes, public relations materials, research materials, scripts, and scores. Of note in this series are rare production shots of Robert Preston in the flop We Take the Town and a series of letters from poet Archibald MacLeish who wrote Scratch. Also unique in this series are scripts marked with the stage manager’s cues for the final production, drafts of shows in development, and often detailed audition notes - a record of the many complicated steps in the production process.

This series holds sound and video recordings, such as live audio recordings of shows Ostrow produced including an early reading of 1776, Anthony Hopkins in the London production of M. Butterfly, an audio recording of American Passion (1983), and La Bête (1991). There are also unreleased demo recordings of 1776, Doll, as well as a recording of Stephen Sondheim singing Act I songs from The Girls Upstairs, which later became Follies.

Videos consist of tapes of lectures Ostrow gave at various venues, a recording of the 1995 Doll reading, and the press reels for M. Butterfly.

Audio/visual materials are unavailable pending digitization.

Series III: Musical Theatre Lab 1975-2005

Founded in 1973, the Musical Theatre Lab is a nonprofit workshop for experimental theatre. Originating in New York, the Lab relocated to the Kennedy Center in Washington D.C., then the University of Houston when Ostrow became head of the Musical Theatre Department. This series contains correspondence related to the development and day-to-day business of the Lab and playbills and rare photographs from many of the Lab’s productions.

This series also includes video recordings, including musical theater collaborations and lab classes from 1995 and 1999.

Audio/visual materials are unavailable pending digitization.

Series IX: Chronological Files 1984-2002

Stuart Ostrow's Chronological files are comprised of day-to-day files Ostrow maintained on his computer between 1984 and 2002. They consist mainly of outgoing letters to friends and collaborators and act as a de facto diary. They offer great insight into Ostrow's thoughts, professional activities, and personal life. These letters tell the story of being a hands-on producer: lining up funding, stars, and venues; handling the creators; creating industry buzz; promoting the production in the press; and most of all keeping all those pieces in place. Throughout the period covered in Chronological Files, Ostrow was often developing multiple projects at one time, so files on a particular play or musical may be spread out over several years.

The letters are all outgoing, but outgoing emails from 2000 and 2001 often include incoming emails. Ostrow's outgoing letters mainly deal with theatrical productions he and his friends were working on, or considering working on, including 1040, La Bête, Doll, Face Value, M. Butterfly, and Sweet Smell of Success. Other documents related to productions include proposals, agreements, contracts, budgets, royalty statements, and notes. Ostrow's letters also cover more general theatre industry topics such as theatrical organizations, special events, conferences, and new publications on theatre. Of particular interest are Ostrow's letters regarding the 2000 Pulitzer Prize for Drama, for which he served on the jury.

Ostrow's memoir, A Producer's Broadway Journey, is also documented extensively in his chronological files, with correspondence, proposals, drafts, and excerpts. There are drafts of individual chapters as well as the bibliography, index, and titles page. Ostrow's second book, Thank You Very Much: The Little Guide to Auditioning for the Musical Theatre, is documented less extensively, with drafts of the book and letters to prospective publishers.

Ostrow's teaching career at the University of Houston is a major subject in his files from 1995 to 2002. In addition to discussing his classes and the productions at the University of Houston Musical Theatre Lab in his letters, they are documented with syllabi, course notes, assignments, lecture notes, scripts, and programs. The process of establishing and managing the Institute for Advanced Study of Musical Theatre (IASMT) dominates Ostrow's files from 1999 to 2001.

(21 computer files 47.86 kilobytes)
Files from 1984 include Ostrow's letters to Edgar Bronfman, Robert Brustein, Alfonse D'Amato, Bob Fosse, Phillip Glass, Bernard Jacobs, John Lahr, Jerry Lieber, and Mike Stoller. 1984 letters document productions such as Man's Fate (La Condition Humaine), Naked City, Sports and Swells, and Sweet Smell of Success. Organizations discussed in 1984 correspondence include Bennington College, The National Council on the Arts, and the National Endowment of the Arts.

er. 2 1985
(155 computer files 347.1 kilobytes)
1985 correspondence recipients include Gerald Beglarian, Robert Brustein, Craig Carnelia, Tom Eyen, Bob Fosse, Phillip Glass, Jerry Herman, Garson Kanin, John Lahr, Norman Lear, David Merrick, Joseph Nederlander, Florence Resnais, Gloria Steinem, Peter Stone, Herman Wouk, and Maury Yeston. Productions discussed are The Dancer, Inside, Outside, Kicks; Man's Fate (La Condition Humaine); The Mummy; Secret Pastures; and Sports and Swells. Such organizations as the Musical Theatre Lab at St. Clements, the National Endowment of the Arts, and the National Foundation for Advancement in the Arts are discussed here.

er. 3 1986
(69 computer files 145.9 kilobytes)
Ostrow's 1986 outgoing letters were written to such individuals as Alan and Marilyn Bergman, Tom Eyen, Jerry Herman, David Henry Hwang, Lucille Lortel, Alan Menken, and Harold Prince. Projects discussed and documented here include Doll, Inside/Outside, Kicks, The Mummy, Sports and Swells, and a lecture Ostrow gave at New York University.

er. 4 1987
(17 computer files 34.48 kilobytes)
1987 files include letters to Schuyler Chapin and Gerald Schoenfeld; negotiations for a lecture Ostrow gave at the University of Michigan; and press releases, correspondence, and rehearsal notes from M. Butterfly.
Files from 1987 include brief biographies of Ostrow; letters from Ostrow to John Dexter, David Geffen, John Lithgow, and Stephen Sondheim; and pertain to M. Butterfly, Man's Fate (La Condition Humaine), and the National Humanities Center.

Ostrow's 1989 correspondence includes letters to Robert Brustein, John Dexter, David Geffen, Neil Simon, and Peter Stone and discusses productions such as The Count of Monte Christo, M. Butterfly, Whitsun, and several unproduced ideas. Speeches and other writings by Ostrow are also included here.

1990 files include brief biographies of Ostrow and letters from Ostrow to Alvin Deutsch and Andrew Lloyd Webber. Correspondence covers the controversial casting of Jonathan Pryce in Miss Saigon and Ostrow productions La Bête and M. Butterfly. Scripts for La Bête are also included.

Ostrow's files from 1991 consist mainly of letters and production materials pertaining to La Bête and M. Butterfly.

Ostrow's 1992 correspondents include David Henry Hwang, Kevin Kline, Craig Lucas, James Nederlander, Ronald Rauchberg, Jerome Robbins, William Safire, and Jerry Zacks. Ostrow projects such as La Bête, The Cradle, Face Value, and The Princess Problem are documented with correspondence and other production materials. There is also an excerpt from Ostrow's book, then titled Ice in the Wintertime.

Ostrow's files from 1995 contain letters to David Brown, Linda Rodgers Emory, Anthony Hopkins, David Henry Hwang, Tommy Mottola, and Gwen Verdon. Productions discussed and documented here include Allos Makar, The Cradle, Face Value, Jump, Life of Galileo, M. Butterfly, and Sweet Smell of Success. Organizations discussed in 1993 correspondence include the National Alliance for Musical Theatre and the University of Houston. There are also excerpts and outlines from Ostrow's book, then titled Ice in the Wintertime or Up and Down the Whole Creation: A Broadway Journey.

Correspondence recipients from 1994 include Scott Frankel, Adam Guettel, Anthony Hopkins, David Henry Hwang, Michael Korie, John Lithgow, and Peter Stone. The letters mainly pertain to The Cradle, Doll, The Incredible Shrinking Man, and Ring Round the Moon. In addition to correspondence, Doll is documented with proposals and contracts. There is also correspondence pertaining to and excerpts from Ostrow's book, then titled Beyond Broadway.
