Creator history
Christopher Street That New Magazine, Inc. was founded in New York City in 1976 by Charles Ortleb for the purpose of publishing Christopher Street (subtitled That New Magazine), a monthly literary magazine featuring fiction, nonfiction, poetry, news, book reviews and photography of interest to the gay community. Its founder hoped to encourage the development of gay literature by providing gay writers with an outlet for the publication of their works. In addition to encouraging new authors the magazine has also published excerpts of gay fiction and nonfiction published by gay and mainstream publishers. Included among the many authors it has published are Michael Denny, Richard Friedel, Seymour Kleinberg, Ned Rorem, George Stambolian, Edmund White and George Whitmore. The magazine is under the editorial direction of Thomas Steele. Its production manager is Bruce Eves. In 1989 it had a total reported circulation of 11,000 copies including 6,000 subscriptions.
Scope and content note
The records (1979-82) are arranged into three series: Series 1. Authors' Scripts; Series 2. Galleys of Articles Published in Christopher Street; and Series 3. Monographs. The bulk of the collection (Series 1) consists of authors' scripts of works of fiction and nonfiction in the field of gay literature which were submitted to the editor and publisher by literary agents and publishing houses for consideration for review or serialization in Christopher Street. A few of the scripts are accompanied by letters of transmittal from the agent or publisher. Many of the scripts bear editorial corrections.

Series 2 consists of galleys (and a few scripts) of articles published in Christopher Street which were being considered for publication in The Christopher Street Reader (New York, Coward, McCann & Geoghegan, c1983). Included also are galleys and scripts of articles published in Aphrodisiac, Fiction from Christopher Street (New York, Putnam, [1982]).

Series 3 consists of monographs (in typescript) of scholarly articles on gays, lesbians and homosexuality.
